A talk by

Dr Ian Francis - RSPB Scotland

For over 20 years Ian Francis has been responsible for RSPB work from Buchan to Fife and inland to the Cairngorms and Perthshire. This includes many land-use and wildlife conservation issues, from forestry in the uplands, through bird of prey killing and urban development to controversial golf courses on the coast! He is the author of a major atlas describing the changing bird populations of the north-east and has looked in detail at trends in wildlife and how humans have influenced these."
